This powder never varies. A marvel of purity, strength and wholesomeness. More economical than the ordinary kind, and cannot be sold in competition with the multitude of low cost, short-weight, adulterated goods, sold only in cans. Royal Baking Powder Co., 110 Wall Street, New York.

Mat. McCabe, of New Brunswick, Ill., offers to pay five dollars to any person troubled with bloody flux, who will take Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy according to directions and does not get well in the shortest possible time. One half of a 25 cent bottle of this remedy cured him of bloody flux, after he tried other medicines and the prescriptions of physicians without benefit. Mr. McCabe is perfectly safe in making this offer, as more than a thousand bottles of this remedy are sold each day and it has never been known to fail in any case of colic, cholera morbus, dysentery, diarrhoea or bloody flux, when the plain printed directions were followed. For sale by G. C. Thaxter.

A Rare Chance.

"O, George," she murmured, "I know you are strong and will protect me, yet even now, as we recline in this swinging hammock, I am surrounded by fear." "Fear, my darling!" said George DeKome-ly, "what fear can surround you?" "Atmosphere," she chuckled, and the hammock broke down to punish her.

A boy in New York was the other day sent to the Insane Asylum his mania resulted from excessive cigarette smoking. It was proved that he used three packages a day. The only wonder is that scores of youths are not sent to the Insane Asylum for a like cause, when we consider the testimony of physicians regarding the balefulness of the habit referred to.

"POKER" BROWN.

Passes Away at San Jacinto, Near Eye Patch, in this state.

The Silver State says: Joseph B. Brown, who was known throughout Nevada by the sobriquet of "Poker" Brown, died last Saturday. He was a pioneer of Nevada, and was the owner of two hundred feet in the Crown Point and Gould & Curry mines on the Comstock, the proceeds of the sales of which he invested in poker, a game for which he had a morbid hankering, though with him it was invariably a losing one. In 1862 he came to this county and settled on Big Meadows. He had some business and engaged in the freighting business and started his teams to Carson. Arriving at Ragtown he engaged in the favorite game with the sharpers, who lusted that noted oasis, and he lost teams and wagons at one sitting. Returning to Humboldt he went prospecting and secured a large interest in the Montezuma mine, which he disposed of $20,000. His house became the headquarters for local "sports" while the money held out. When he reached bedrock again financially he engaged in raising hogs and cattle, and in a short time had large herds of porkers and steers. With prosperity his passion for poker returned, and in a game of professionals, in which the stakes were steers and hogs, he lost every head that he owned. He was honest, inoffensive and industrious, and usually lucky everything in which he engaged save the game for which he had an uncontrollable passion. With advancing age and declining health his good luck as a prospector deserted him, and in vain he sought bonanzas. The Silver State but echoes the sentiments of all his acquaintances in saying, "Peace to the ashes of the old pioneer."

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE.—Saturday afternoon between 3 and 4 o'clock, while constructing a new iron railroad bridge across the Humboldt river about seven miles west of Palisade, F. J. Roberts, John Johnson and L. J. Sparks narrowly escaped instant death. The bridge which is entirely of iron, was being built in place of an old wooden structure which spans the river at the above named place. The workmen had just put in place what is known as the main letter rods, when the bridge was struck by a sudden and heavy wind which capsize it, and, the men, not having time to get off, were precipitated along with the bridge to the water some sixty or more feet. In an interview one of them told an Independent reporter that he can in no way convince how any of them escaped being killed.

All three men were conveyed here on No. 1 for medical treatment, and although being more or less severely bruised, not one in the party had any bones broken.

Sparks and Roberts left yesterday morning to join the crew at Palisade where they expect within a few days to be able to go to work and Johnson, who is hurt the worst was taken to the hospital at Sacramento.—Independent.
